

Contents

Preface	ix
Section 1. Visionary Pioneers Continue to Guide Us
Reflections on TICCIT, C. Victor Bunderson	1
Addressing Diversity in (e-)Learning, Patrick Suppes in conversation with Michael W. Allen	31
PLATO, Plasma Screens, and Computer-Based Education, Donald L. Bitzer in conversation with Michael W. Allen	43
Section 2. Learning Technology Takes Shape
Back to the Future of Educational Technology, Fred T. Hofstetter	59
It Seemed Like a Good Idea at the Time: The Development of Computer-Assisted Instruction in Schools, Peter G. Fairweather	83
Reflections on e-Learning: The Long History of a New Idea, Wallace Hannum	101
Lessons from the STARS Revisited, Thomas C. Reeves and William D. Aggen	127
Reflections on a Four-Decade Search for Effective, Efficient, and Engaging Instruction, M. David Merrill	141
Section 3. What Does It All Mean? Pitfalls and Overhauls
Dreams and Responsibilities: Learning and the New Technologies, Tom Boyle	171
Beyond Knowledge Dissemination: Learning to Solve Problems Online, David H. Jonassen	189
What's Right and What's Wrong with Online Learning, Greg Kearsley	207
Technology and Learning: A Proposal for Adaptive Tutorial Learning, Alfred Bork, Carole A. Bagley, and Xiwen Zhang	227
Cheap But Not Tacky: Lessons Learned During e-Learning Adventures, Sivasailam "Thiagi" Thiagarajan	249

Section 4. Are We Lost? Where Do We Go from Here?
Moving e-Learning into the Workplace, Allison Rossett	265
The Business Impact of e-Learning, Nick H.M. van Dam	285
Lessons Learned . . . and Relearned, Allen Avner	307
We're Professionals, Aren't We? What Drives Our Performance? Will Thalheimer	325
A Final Word	339
Pfeiffer Publications Guide	345

<http://www.pbookshop.com>