
Contents

Preface	vii
1 A Drama Unfolds	1
Introduction	1
The Conservative Funding Legacy	1
The ‘Arms Race’	5
The Labour Party’s Response	7
Questions for the Labour Party	10
The Ecclestone Affair	13
The Neill Committee	16
Conclusion	19
2 Regulatory Objectives	23
The Prevention of Corruption and Conflicts of Interest	23
Equality of Opportunity and Fair Competition for Political Office	27
A Need to Ensure that Political Parties are Adequately Funded	29
Promoting Citizen Participation in the Funding of Political Parties	32
Respect for the Nature and Diversity of Party Structure	35
The Protection of Human Rights	38
Conclusion	41
3 Regulatory Methods	43
Introduction	43
Transparency and Disclosure	43
Contribution Controls	45
Spending Controls	49
State Aid and Public Funding	52
Self-Regulation or State Regulation?	55
Supervision and Enforcement	58
Conclusion	61

4 Party Autonomy and Public Accountability	63
Introduction	63
Diversity of Party Structure	64
The Principle of Party Autonomy	67
Autonomy of Party Organisation: The Role of Legislation	70
Autonomy and Legality	73
From Autonomy to Accountability: Registration and Party Identity	76
State Supervision: Registration and Financial Accountability	79
Conclusion	85
5 Donations to Political Parties: The Regulatory Framework	87
Introduction	87
Disclosure and Corruption	87
Who May Donate to Political Parties?	90
The Mechanics of Reporting and Disclosure	94
Who Does Donate to Political Parties?	98
The Problem of Avoidance	102
Loopholes in the Regulatory Framework	107
Conclusion	111
6 From ‘Sleaze’ to ‘High-Value Donors’ to Loans	115
Introduction	115
‘Sleaze’: The Continuing Problem of Political Donations	115
The Labour Party’s Response	120
‘High-Value Donors’: The Labour Party	123
‘High-Value Donors’: The Conservative Party	127
The Loans Affair: A New Problem Erupts	133
Implications and Consequences of the Loans Affair	138
Conclusion	141
7 Spending Limits in Election Campaigns	143
Regulatory Challenges	143
The Victorian Legacy: Candidate Limits	145
The Problem of Third Parties	148
Spending Limits on Political Parties	151
Calculating and Enforcing the Limit	154
Spending Limits and Third Parties	157

Spending Limits in Practice – The First Cycle	160
The General Election 2005	163
Conclusion	168
8 The Role of the State: Supporting Candidates and Political Parties	171
Introduction	171
Regulatory Challenges	172
Responsibility of the State	173
Meeting the State’s Responsibility	176
Party Political Broadcasts: Transferring the State’s Obligations	179
New Forms of State Support	182
Proposals for Additional State Support	185
Reluctance and Resistance to Change	188
Tax Relief – A False Trail	191
Conclusion	195
9 Lessons from Canada	197
Introduction	197
Political Parties in Canada	197
The Election Expenses Act 1974	199
The Parties and their Funds	204
Bill C-24, Political Donations and State Funding	208
The Impact of Bill C-24	212
Bill C-24 and Party Structure	217
Conclusion	221
10 Building on PPERA	225
Introduction	225
The Next Step – Regulatory Objectives	225
The Problems with Contribution Limits	227
Donations – Let the Members Decide	230
A Focus on Spending	232
State Aid: Building on the British Model?	235
Making a Fresh Start – Back to Houghton	239
Qualifying Conditions for State Support	242
Promoting Democracy: A Quid Pro Quo	244
Conclusion	248

Appendices	251
Appendix 1: Exchange of Letters between the Labour Party and Sir Patrick Neill QC	253
Appendix 2: Annual Accounts of the Political Parties	259
Appendix 3: The Structure of the Labour Party	265
Appendix 4: From Election Funding to Political Funding in Germany	269
Appendix 5: State Funding in Sweden – Party Autonomy and Public Funding	271
 Index	 273

<http://www.pbookshop.com>