

Contents

Acknowledgements	ix
Introduction	1
1. On the Nature and Value of Promises	7
Fried's Argument: Convention, Social Practice, Trust	8
Trust as a Condition	14
Why Promise?	20
Why Want a Promise?	21
What is Wrong with Breaking a Promise?	22
The Value of Promise	27
Promises between Strangers	29
2. Normativity, Trust and Threats	33
I. The Disjunctive View	33
Threats and Expressive Reasons	37
Threats and Trust	39
The Willingness to Assume the Risk of Disobedience	46
Threats and Exclusionary Reasons	49
II. Normativity and Threats in Personal Relations	51
Coercive and Non-Coercive Threats	51
From Threats to Enforceability	54
3. The Nature and Value of Contractual Relations	57
I. Contracts and the Role of Trust	57
Enforceability and the Trivialisation of the Role of Trust	57
Trust and the True Nature of the Practice	61
Preview	65
II. Contracts, Promises and Special Relations	65
What is Special in Special Relations?	66
Contracts, Promises and Special Relations	72
The Intrinsic Value of Contracts	78
Personal Detachment and Relational Contracts	80
Preview	86

4. Remedies	89
The Standard Remedy and the Theory of the Practice	89
Choosing a Performance Remedy: Why Not Specific Performance?	95
The Harm Principle and Remedies for Breach	100
Mitigation	109
The Freedom to Change One's Mind	112
5. Freedom of Contract, Freedom from Contract	117
I. Freedom of Contract	117
Neutrality	121
Neutrality, Fairness and Inequality of Bargaining Power	122
The Possibility of Neutrality	123
Personal Autonomy	126
Preliminaries	127
Autonomy-Derived Value as a Matter of Degree	128
Respect for Autonomy as Ground for Restricting Freedom	129
The Value of Autonomy and the Pursuit of the Good	131
Autonomy, Contract and Promise	133
Conclusion	135
II. Freedom from Contract	135
Intention to Create Legal Relations	136
Bibliography	143
Index	147