

Contents

| | |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------|
| Table of Cases | xi |
| Table of Treaties, Declarations, and Other Instruments | xvii |
| List of Abbreviations | xxi |
| Introduction | 1 |
| 1. Arendt and the right to have rights | 2 |
| 2. Structure of the book | 6 |
| 2.1 A 'place in the world' | 6 |
| 2.2 The subject of rights | 8 |
| 2.3 Chapter descriptions | 8 |
| 1. The Right to have Rights as a 'Place in the World' | 13 |
| 1. Nationality and emplacement: a 'place in the world' and the international legal order | 15 |
| 1.1 Entry as the national's return | 16 |
| 1.2 Questioning the national's place: not all nationals are 'in place' | 21 |
| 2. Humanity and emplacement: place and relationships | 23 |
| 2.1 The right to enter one's 'own country': a relational perspective | 24 |
| 2.2 Emplacement and the right to respect for family and private life | 25 |
| 2.3 Non-refoulement | 28 |
| 3. Non-nationals and exclusion: the 'non-place' of containment | 31 |
| 4. Conclusion | 38 |
| 2. The Right to have Rights as Nationality | 39 |
| 1. The formal or thin conception: the right to a nationality as a question of international public order | 40 |
| 1.1 Nationality and citizenship | 43 |
| 2. The human rights orientation: nationality as an instrument for the protection of rights | 47 |
| 2.1 The right to a nationality: curtailing state discretion in the regulation of nationality | 48 |
| 2.2 Nationality and the protection of human rights | 51 |
| 2.3 Diplomatic protection | 53 |
| 2.4 Nationality as eclipsing humanity? | 55 |
| 3. The democratic governance orientation: the right to a nationality as essential for democratic governance | 57 |
| 4. The substantive belonging orientation: the right to a nationality and substantive membership | 60 |
| 5. Conclusion | 65 |

| | |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| 3. The Right to have Rights as Citizenship | 67 |
| 1. The right to vote in international human rights instruments | 69 |
| 2. Citizenship and deviancy | 71 |
| 3. Looking beyond prisoner disenfranchisement: an Arendtian perspective? | 77 |
| 4. Citizenship, deviancy, and 'race' | 80 |
| 5. Citizenship, deviancy, and 'social exclusion' | 85 |
| 6. Conclusion | 90 |
| 4. The Right to have Rights as Humanity | 92 |
| 1. The individual as the subject of human rights | 93 |
| 2. The human transcends the citizen | 97 |
| 3. Internal borders: humanity imperilled? | 101 |
| 4. The undocumented migrant as the human: questioning internal borders | 104 |
| 5. The borders of international human rights law | 108 |
| 6. The border dividing national law and international human rights law: the human as the deportable alien | 111 |
| 7. Conclusion | 116 |
| 5. The Right to have Rights as the Politics of Human Rights | 118 |
| 1. Arendt: the problem of the paradox of human rights | 119 |
| 2. Rancière: the subject of rights as the subject of politics | 120 |
| 2.1 Lodging a dispute: asserting and verifying equality | 124 |
| 2.2 The assumption of equality | 127 |
| 2.3 The limitless and open spectrum of the subject of rights | 128 |
| 2.4 The contingency of the present order | 128 |
| 2.5 The agency of Rancière's politics v biopolitics | 130 |
| 3. The limits of Rancière's subject of rights | 131 |
| 4. Rancière and human rights law | 133 |
| 4.1 The limits of human rights law | 133 |
| 4.2 The emancipatory potential of human rights law | 136 |
| 4.3 The politics of practice | 139 |
| 5. Conclusion | 140 |
| Conclusion | 142 |
| 1. The right to have rights and the problem of naming | 142 |
| 2. Un-naming the placeholder: the right to have rights as a gesture of delegitimation | 145 |
| References | 149 |
| Index | 161 |