

Introduction

Globalization has created a demand for attorneys who are licensed to practice law in multiple jurisdictions.

Each contributor for this book has been admitted to the jurisdiction about which he or she wrote, is in the process of being admitted to that jurisdiction, or has at least researched the bar admissions process in that jurisdiction for the purpose of seeking admission. It should be noted, however, that in certain cases where a jurisdiction does not admit foreign nationals as “local” attorneys, the contributor may be someone who is familiar enough with the process to comment on that process, but is not admitted in that jurisdiction. The contributors for this book were solicited primarily through the ABA Section of International Law and several of its over sixty committees.

The jurisdictions covered in this book are based on the response we received from those solicitations, which has led to a somewhat random appearance of the jurisdictions that were covered in this book. If a jurisdiction is not covered in this book, then that is because no one expressed an interest in writing about that jurisdiction, even after multiple solicitations. As we publish subsequent editions to this book, we hope to add additional jurisdictions, as well as update the ones included here. If you would like to contribute a jurisdiction to a future edition, or have a comment, then feel free to contact Russell Dombrow at IntlBarAdmissions@gmail.com. We hope you find this book of value.

Russell W. Dombrow
Nancy A. Matos
Co-Editors