

THE CONTRACT OF EMPLOYMENT

TABLE OF CONTENTS

1. Introduction and History	1
2. Who is an Employee?	36
3. Formation of the Contract	83
4. Vitiating Factors, Illegality and Misleading Conduct	159
5. Sources Of The Parties' Rights and Duties	198
6. Alteration of the Contract	287
7. The Duties of Employees	338
8. The Duties of Employers	481
9. Performance of the Contract	560
10. Termination for Breach and Repudiation	614
11. Termination by Notice and Agreement	681
12. Termination by Frustration	747
13. Changes in the Employing Enterprise: Redundancy and External Administration	787
14. Damages for Breach of Contract	817
15. Equitable Remedies	931
16. Post-Employment Obligations	1040
Index	1090

Chapter 1 INTRODUCTION AND HISTORY

Introduction	1
Employment contracts and the law of contract	1
The archetypal and distinguishing features of employment contracts	4
A snapshot of the Australian workforce	13
National system employers and employees and the Fair Work Act	15
The many histories of the contract of employment	17
The master and servant model	18
Service, freedom and contract	23
Misbehaviour and desertion	30
The emergence of a contractual model: 1850–1950	32

Chapter 2 WHO IS AN EMPLOYEE?

Introduction	36
The multi-factor test	40
No single factor is determinative	40
Is the worker conducting his or her own business?	42
Control of the manner of the performance of work	48
Delegation and service	52
Benefits usually provided to employees	54
Shams and express terms categorising the relationship	56
The totality of the relationship and the parol evidence rule	62
Other relationships considered	65
Directors and corporate officers	65
Officers in the public sector	70
Bailment, partnerships, tenancy and agency	72
Tripartite employment arrangements	74
Who are the parties to the contract?	75
Labour hire arrangements	78

Chapter 3 FORMATION OF THE CONTRACT

Introduction	83
Agreement: enforcing contracts where offer and acceptance are opaque	84
Objectivity in contract	86
Offer	89
Offer defined	89
Communication of the offer and authority to make the offer	93
Conditional offers	95
Termination of offers	96

Acceptance	98
Unequivocal assent to the offer	98
Communication and modes of acceptance	100
Acceptance by conduct	103
Consideration	105
The meaning of and necessity for consideration	105
Consideration in employment contracts and mutuality	106
Detriment and benefits, and consideration moving from the promisee	109
Consideration must be sufficient and lawful, but need not be adequate	111
Uncertain, vague and past consideration	112
The intention to create a contract	114
The necessity for an intention to contract	114
Ascertaining the parties' intention	117
Certainty and completeness	120
Overview	120
Uncertainty	124
Agreements to agree and agreements subject to contract	125
Discretion to perform	128
Cures for uncertainty and incompleteness	131
Privity and capacity to contract	133
The doctrine of privity	133
Capacity to contract: minors, the mentally disabled and intoxicated persons	137
Capacity to contract: corporations, the Crown and unincorporated associations	139
Agency and authority to contract	142
The relationship of agency	142
The authority of an agent: actual and ostensible	146
Ratification of unauthorised acts and contracts with promoters of companies	150
Acts by agents with and without authority	153
Undisclosed principals	155
The corporate seal rule	156

Chapter 4 VITIATING FACTORS, ILLEGALITY AND MISLEADING CONDUCT

Introduction	159
Vitiating factors	160
Duress under the common law and coercion prohibited by statute	160
Unconscionability: The equitable doctrine and statutory remedies	168
Undue influence	171
Mistake	172
Rectification of the written terms	175
Illegality	177
Contracts prohibited by statute and the common law	177

Misleading or deceptive conduct in employment	186
Conduct 'in trade or commerce'	188
Misleading and deceptive conduct	191
Representations about future matters	193

Chapter 5 SOURCES OF THE PARTIES' RIGHTS AND DUTIES

Introduction	198
Overview	198
Terms defined and categorised	200
Promissory terms and representations	202
Proof and construction of the terms: the parol evidence rule and its exceptions	204
Introduction and overview	204
The factual and legal context of the contract	205
Is the document the sole repository of the agreement?	207
Oral representations and later written terms	209
Prior negotiations, declarations of subjective intent and subsequent conduct	213
Proving implied terms, the parties and the subject matter	216
Express terms	217
Terms incorporated by signature	219
Terms incorporated by notice	220
Terms incorporated by a course of dealing	221
Terms incorporated by reference	223
Does the bridging term give contractual effect to the external source?	227
The alteration and termination of the external source document	230
Is the term apt for incorporation?	232
Implied terms	235
Overview and implicit terms	235
Terms implied in law	236
Terms implied in fact	242
The nature of the term implied in fact	242
Implication of terms in formal and informal contracts	244
Particular aspects of the tests	247
Terms implied by custom	252
Implication of a term based on custom: the test	252
Particular aspects of the test	254
The rarity of terms based on custom and 'crystallised custom'	257
Past conduct as a source of binding obligations: a comment	260
Statutes, industrial instruments and contract	262
The Fair Work Act, modern awards and enterprise agreements	263
Contracts and conduct in breach of a statute or industrial instrument	264

The relationship between statutes and contract: public sector employment	269
Industrial instruments as the source of contractual rights	271
Statutory and contractual rights	271
Industrial instruments as express terms in an employee–employer contract	273
Industrial instruments as implied terms	275
Collective agreements as a union–employer contract	277

Chapter 6 ALTERATION OF THE CONTRACT

Introduction and overview	287
Alterations in accordance with the contract	290
Express powers to unilaterally alter the terms	290
Managerial prerogative and the alteration of the manner of the performance of work	293
Exercise of a right to terminate and notices to vary	296
Demotion and changes to remuneration, status and duties	297
Changing the location of the employment	303
Variation of the contract	307
Elements of a variation	307
Acceptance	308
Consideration: the orthodox approach	311
The rule in Stilk v Myrick	315
Existing and additional duties	316
Continued employment, forbearance and practical benefits	318
Variation distinguished from other alterations	322
Novation	325
Assignment of rights and obligations	331
Election	333
Release, accord and satisfaction, and cancellation	334

Chapter 7 THE DUTIES OF EMPLOYEES

Overview	338
The duty to serve and industrial action	339
The duty to serve and cooperate	339
Industrial action and the employment contract	341
Scope of the employment	342
Duties defined by scope of the employment and related concepts	342
The Scope defines the limits of some duties	343
The nature of the engagement and the scope of the employment	344
Express terms and consent	346
The course of dealings and obedience to orders	347
The course of employment	348
Duty to obey directions, answer questions and disclose misconduct	349
The duty to obey directions	349
Unreasonable directions	352
Directions and safety	354
Consequences of a breach: the right to terminate	355

Disclosing misdeeds: prospective employees and employers	355
Deceit	357
Reporting one's own misdeeds	358
Reporting the misdeeds of others	360
Answering questions honestly	361
Duty to use care and skill	363
Statement of the duty	363
Statutory modifications of the duty	365
Consequence of a breach of the duty: damages	366
Consequences of a breach: the right to terminate	368
The duty of fidelity	370
Overview of the contractual, statutory and fiduciary duties of fidelity	370
The five rules of fidelity and their qualifications	373
The centrality of loyalty	375
The various and divided loyalties of employees	379
Contractual consequences of a breach	381
Employees as fiduciaries and the role of contract	382
Differences between the contractual and fiduciary duties	384
The conflict of duty and interest rule	386
Conflict of duty and duty: employment by more than one employer	388
Misuse of the employee's position (the no profit rule)	390
Duty to account for property	393
Misuse of information	397
Is there a positive duty to advance the employer's business?	401
Common issues applicable to all of the duties of fidelity	404
Advantaging the employee, or another, or causing detriment to the employer	404
Duration of the contractual and fiduciary obligation	406
Disclosure and informed consent	408
Honesty, good faith and collateral purposes	412
Aspects of the duty relating to competition	415
Competing with employer	415
The scope of the obligations	415
Competition during employment	417
Competing for employees and suppliers	420
Work within and outside of ordinary hours	421
Preparing for post-employment competition	424
Resigning to secure a maturing business opportunity	428
Secret benefits and accounting for the employer's property	430
Obtaining the advantage of secret benefits	430
Types of secret benefits and the connection with employment	432
Secrecy, informed consent and the consequences of receiving a secret benefit	435
Consequences of breach: the right to terminate	437
Ownership of the work, inventions and intellectual property	437
Ownership of the product of work	437
The connection between the invention and the employment	439
Accounting to the employer for inventions	444
Ownership of copyright and designs	445
The contractual, equitable and statutory duties of confidence	446
The unhappy mixture	446
Definitions and the principles briefly stated	451

Equitable duty of confidence	452
Implied and express contractual duties of confidence	453
Elements of the action of breach of confidence and defences	456
Imparted in circumstances importing an obligation	456
Identifying the specific information	457
What is confidential information?	458
Misuse of the information	463
Detriment	465
Defences and limits to liability	466
Acts incompatible with the employment and the mutual duty of trust and confidence	471
The historical development of the duty	471
Acts inconsistent with employment and the scope	475
Sex, drugs, crime and abuse	477

Chapter 8 THE DUTIES OF EMPLOYERS

Overview	481
Minimum conditions of employment under the Fair Work Act	481
National Employment Standards, modern awards and enterprise agreements	481
National Employment Standards	483
The implied term of mutual trust and confidence	487
The existence and scope of the implied term	487
The rationale and origin of the term	492
The elements of a breach	494
The implied term, express terms and other instruments	497
Application of the term and consequences of a breach	498
Failures to respect the employee's rights	498
Humiliation, abuse, and inquiries into allegations	499
Procedural fairness and equal treatment	501
Consequences of a breach of the term	502
Good faith and cooperation in employment contracts	503
Duty of good faith	503
The parties' duty to cooperate	510
The employer's duty to indemnify the employee	512
The duty to provide work	514
The traditional approach: overview and history	514
Public performers	520
Contracts for skilled employees	521
Remuneration based on the performance of work	523
Appointments to perform specific duties	528
Effect of a breach of the duty	530
A comment on the general rule	530
The employer's duty of care	535
Introduction	535
Sources of the Duty	536
The Nature of the Duty	540
Standard of Care	547
Aspects of the Duty	552
Limits on recovery	557

Chapter 9 PERFORMANCE OF THE CONTRACT

Overview and definitions	560
Order of performance	564
The obligation to pay wages is usually a dependent obligation	564
The wages for service bargain and the obligation to serve	566
Independent obligations to pay remuneration	567
Readiness and willingness to serve: orthodoxy and heterodoxy	572
Duration of performance: entire and divisible contracts and obligations	575
The great case of Cutter v Powell and the fall of entire employment contracts	576
Entire and divisible contracts and obligations	579
The common law entire obligation rule	582
The Apportionment Acts and entire obligations	584
Exact, substantial, partial and defective performance	588
Exact performance and the doctrine of substantial performance	589
Remuneration and industrial action under the Fair Work Act	591
The rejection and acceptance of part performance: ‘no work–no pay’	593
Deductions, Truck Act provisions, forfeiture, abatement and set-off	596
Who must perform and time for performance	601
Personal performance of the contract	601
The time for performance	604
Suspension of performance and standing down employees	605
Suspension: the general principle	605
The Crown’s right to suspend and statutory powers of suspension	608
Effect of valid and invalid suspensions	610
The power to stand down employees	611
 Chapter 10 TERMINATION FOR BREACH AND REPUDIATION
The right to terminate	614
Introduction and historical background	614
Definitions and key concepts	618
The relationship between repudiation, serious breach and anticipatory breach	620
Termination for serious breach	622
Proving the term and the breach	622
The tripartite classification of terms	623
Express contractual and statutory rights to terminate	626
The right to terminate and the opinion of the employer	627
Termination for repudiation	627
Introduction	627
Readiness and willingness	630
Repudiation based on words or conduct	631
Repudiation based on an erroneous construction of a contract	632
Repudiation based on inability	633
Constructive dismissal and forced resignations	635
Assessing the seriousness of the breach or repudiation	636
The seriousness of the breach or repudiation	636

Factors relevant in assessing the seriousness	640
Wilful breaches and the intention to repudiate	642
Single breaches, cumulative breaches and the 'last straw principle'	646
Consequences of a serious breach, repudiation and an election	650
No automatic termination of the contract	650
The effect of a serious breach or repudiation on wages	651
The locus poenitentiae and the opportunity to repent	654
The effect on damages and equitable relief	655
Consequences of an affirmation	656
Consequences of a termination of the contract	658
The election to terminate or affirm	662
General principles governing elections	662
The futility and limited utility of electing to affirm	663
The grounds for termination and after-acquired information	667
Time of the election and the effect of delay	669
Exercising express rights to terminate	670
Clarity and communication of the election	672
Inference of an election from conduct	673
Loss of the right to terminate: 'condonation' and 'waiver'	675
Breach or repudiation by the terminating party	678

Chapter 11 TERMINATION BY NOTICE AND AGREEMENT

Introduction	681
The right to terminate by giving notice and its exercise	682
The right to terminate by notice	682
Exercise of the right to terminate by notice	685
The exercise of the right in a state of emotional distress	690
Contractual limits on the right to terminate	691
Express contractual limits on the right to terminate by notice	691
Fixed term contracts and permanent employment	695
Possible implied contractual limits on the right to give notice	700
Statutory and public sector job security provisions	704
Public sector employment generally	704
Limitations on the exercise of powers of dismissal	707
The statutory right to notice	711
Implication of a term to provide reasonable notice	713
The presumption of yearly hiring: an historical note	713
The term implied and its relationship with other terms and instruments	721
The length of reasonable notice: purpose and general approach	724
Factors in determining the length of reasonable notice	728

Other matters relating to notice	733
Effect of complying and non-complying notice	733
Withdrawal of notice	737
Payment in lieu of notice	739
Termination by agreement	743

Chapter 12 TERMINATION BY FRUSTRATION

Introduction	747
Overview	747
History and foundation of the doctrine	748
The scope of the doctrine: general concepts	749
Impossibility and intervening illegality	749
Events that create radically different circumstances	751
Destruction of parties' common purpose, shared assumption or the subject matter	752
The scope of the doctrine in employment law	754
The Fair Work Act, the common law and ill employees	754
Illness and frustration	758
Incarceration and war	762
Death and other potentially frustrating events	764
Frustration and statutory schemes	768
Limits of the doctrine: foreseeable events	769
Express terms governing supervening events	769
Foreseen and foreseeable events	770
Foresight and evidence beyond the contract	772
Limits of the doctrine: self-induced frustration	772
The rule against self-induced frustration	772
Fault and illness	775
Fault and imprisonment	775
Application of the doctrine	777
Identification of the frustrating event	777
Dramatic and creeping frustrating events	777
Automatic operation and acts of the parties	780
Frustration automatically terminates the contract	780
Onus of proof	781
Consequences of frustration	782
Effect on future obligations and accrued rights	782
Critique	785

Chapter 13 CHANGES IN THE EMPLOYING ENTERPRISE: REDUNDANCY AND EXTERNAL ADMINISTRATION

Introduction	787
Redundancy	789
The concept of redundancy	789
The contractual right to redundancy pay	794
The statutory right to redundancy pay	795
The right to consultation	797
Insolvency and changes in the employer's identity	798
Transfer of employment: the common law and statute	798
Corporate insolvency and external administration	800
Liability of liquidators, administrators and receivers	802
Priority in insolvency and GEERS	805
Personal insolvency, including bankruptcy	810
Changes in the constitution of unincorporated employers and partnerships	812
Death of a party	814

Chapter 14 DAMAGES FOR BREACH OF CONTRACT

Overview	817
Damages for wrongful dismissal: an overview	819
General Principles	822
The compensatory purpose of damages	822
The various types of damages defined	823
Causation	827
Remoteness: the rule in Hadley v Baxendale	830
Proof of damages and the onus of proof	832
Time for assessment, continuing breaches and the once and for all rule	833
Taxation	836
Interest and inflation	838
Compensation under statutory schemes	839
Damages in an Employment Context	842
The action for wrongful dismissal	842
Loss of remuneration caused by the breach	851
The least burdensome performance rule	854
Loss of chance: general principles	859
Loss of chance: commissions, renewal of contracts, job security provisions and the ACL	861
Fixed term contracts	869
Debt and payments due on termination of employment	870
Damages for mental distress, loss of reputation and the manner of dismissal	871
Overview and summary	871
The troublesome quintet: Addis, Malik, Johnson, Eastwood and Edwards	873
Damages for mental distress: the general rule and its exceptions	879
Aggravated damages and the manner of and motive for the breach	885
Damages for loss of reputation and diminished future employment prospects	887
Damages arising when the employee is denied the right to perform work	891
Critique of the general rules against recovery	892
Mitigation of Loss	896
Overview	896
When a duty to mitigate arises and payments in lieu	899

The duty to mitigate avoidable loss	904
Mitigation and new offers of employment	906
No recovery for avoided loss	912
The deductibility of other benefits	913
The deductibility of payments in lieu of notice, redundancy payments and ex gratia payments	919
Agreed damages clauses	923
Liquidated damages and penal clauses	923
The rule against penalties and its statutory modification	925

Chapter 15 EQUITABLE REMEDIES

Introduction	931
History and overview	931
Definitions and types of coercive relief	934
The form of coercive relief for dismissed employees	937
Prerequisites for the grant of coercive relief	938
There must be an enforceable and subsisting contract	938
There must be an actual or threatened breach of a right	940
Specific performance of employment contracts	940
The traditional rule against specific performance and its demise	940
A modern statement of the rule	945
Enforcement of contractually agreed termination procedures	947
Injunctions to enforce statutory rights	950
Negative stipulations and reasonable restraints of trade	951
Trust and confidence	957
The importance of trust and confidence	957
The meaning of trust and confidence	959
Proof of loss of trust and confidence	962
Inadequacy of other remedies at law	963
Damages usually adequate when the contract is terminable by notice	965
Common irrecoverable damages in employment cases	967
Adequacy of remedies other than damages	971
Express terms governing remedies	971
Equitable defences and other discretionary considerations	972
Readiness and willingness to perform	972
Mutuality	975
Constant supervision and uncertainty	977
Unclean hands, hardship and the effect on third parties	979
Delay, laches and abandonment of rights	981
Impossibility, illegality and futility	982
Coercive relief: other matters	983
Election between specific performance and damages	983
Pellucid terms of the relief	983
Enforcement	984
Equitable remedies against third parties	985
Breach of confidence	985
Liability of third parties arising from breach of the equitable duty of fidelity	987

Interlocutory injunctions	990
The test	992
Balance of convenience considerations	995
Undertakings, final and interlocutory relief	997
Springboard or headstart doctrine	1000
Declarations	1001
Introduction and general considerations	1001
Declarations concerning dismissals in private sector employment	1005
The futility and utility of declarations	1006
Other discretionary considerations	1008
Equitable relief and public sector employment	1010
Statutory, prerogative and equitable relief in public sector employment	1011
Grounds of review	1016
Effect of a wrongful removal or suspension	1017
Monetary and other remedies in equity	1019
Introduction and overview	1019
Equitable compensation	1020
Damages under Lord Cairns' Act	1022
Account of profits	1024
Account and other remedies	1026
Account to enforce contractual rights and intellectual property rights	1028
The assessment of the profit	1030
Account	1033
Delivery up and destruction	1034
Constructive trusts	1036

Chapter 16 POST-EMPLOYMENT OBLIGATIONS: RESTRAINT OF TRADE, USE OF INFORMATION AND REFERENCES

Introduction	1040
Terms in restraint of trade	1040
The meaning of 'restraint' and 'of trade'	1041
The test	1044
Interpretation of restraint of trade terms	1046
Assessing reasonableness: adequacy of consideration and inequality of power	1047
Assessing reasonableness: onus and timing	1050
Consequences of invalidity	1052
Injunctions to restrain breaches of valid restraints	1052
Severance of unreasonable restraints	1054
The Restraints of Trade Act (NSW)	1057

The protectable interests and assessing the restraint's reasonableness	1058
Protectable interests and protection from competition per se	1058
Restraints during employment	1061
Customer connection: scope and duration of the restraint	1062
The interest in maintaining a stable workforce	1068
Restraints to protect trade secrets	1069
Use of information after employment in the absence of an express term	1072
Duties of confidence after the termination of employment	1073
Distinguishing know-how from trade secrets	1075
Use of lists of customers and similar information after termination	1079
References	1082
The importance of references	1082
The obligation to provide a reference	1083
The negligent provision of a reference: Spring v Guardian Assurance plc	1084
The duty owed to the employee	1087
References for employees who commit misconduct	1088

<http://www.pbookshop.com>