

Contents

Introduction	1
Part I: International Law and Development: An Equitable International Society?	5
1 Classical International Law and Development	8
I The Development Paradigm	8
A The Development Era	9
B Disagreements over Development. Theories of 'Underdevelopment'	14
II The Emergence and Evolution of International Development Law – NIEO	17
A Classical International Development Law	17
B The Third World: A Reformist Project for the World	19
C The New International Economic Order (NIEO)	23
III Ultraliberal Reaction and the Impact of Economic Globalisation	28
A The NIEO Abandoned and the Neoliberal Model Triumphant	29
B Law Devalued and the Human Ends of Economics Overlooked	33
2 The New International Development Law	37
I The Human Ends of Development	38
A Human Development	38
B Human Rights and Development: Two Converging Objectives	40
C States' Responsibility for Inadequate Development of their Populations	43
D The Right to Development	45
E Social Development	48
F Good Governance: Democracy and Human Rights	49
G The Contemporary Dominance of the Liberal Model	52
II Sustainable Development	53

A	A New Development Paradigm?	54
B	The Law Relating to Sustainable Development	57
III	The Fight Against Poverty	61
A	The Contemporary Turning Point	61
B	Contribution and Limits	62
3	An Appraisal	66
I	The Practices of Classical and New International Development Law	67
A	Classical International Development Law	67
B	New International Development Law	70
II	The Fight Against Poverty	76
III	General Appraisal: International Development Law and International Economic Law	78
4	Prospects and Alternatives	81
I	Solutions Relating to the Existing Legal and Economic Order	82
A	Solution One	82
B	Solution Two	84
C	Solution Three	85
II	The Possible Implementation of a New Economic Order?	91
III	The Principle of Equality in Question: From Formal Equality to Equity	95
IV	Conclusion	99
Part II: International Law and Recognition: A Decent International Society?		101
5	The Evolution of Recognition Internationally	104
I	From the International Law of Civilised Nations to Postcolonial International Law	104
A	The International Law of Civilised Nations	105
B	Postcolonial International Law	110
C	The Limits of the Process of Recognition	111
II	Cultures and Identities During and After the Cold War	113
A	During the Cold War	113
B	After the Cold War	117
III	International Law and Recognition	119
A	A New Paradigm	119
B	A New Body of Law	122

6	Law and Cultural Diversity	125
I	From Cultural Exception to the Diversity of Cultural Expressions	126
A	Cultural Exception	126
B	The Diversity of Cultural Expressions: The 2005 UNESCO Convention	127
II	Difficulties and Questions	134
7	Recognition through Rights	140
I	Rights of Minorities and Indigenous Peoples	141
A	Rights of Minorities	142
B	Rights of Indigenous Peoples	150
II	Cultural Rights	154
III	Human Rights	162
A	Historical Development	162
B	Discussions and Solutions	170
IV	Women's Rights	175
A	The Principle of Equality and the Fight against Discrimination	175
B	Post-Cold War Developments: New Demands Relating to Gender and the Androcentric Character of International Law	182
8	Reparations for Historical Wrongs: The Lessons of Durban	187
I	Durban's Failures, Breakthrough and Questions	188
A	The Background	188
B	Questions on Compensation for Historical Losses	190
II	The Paradigm of Recognition and the Limits of Resort to Law	195
9	The Law of Recognition versus International Development Law and International Economic Law	202
I	Intersecting Situations and Demands	203
II	The Law of Recognition and Development Law	206
III	The Law of Recognition and International Economic Law	210
	Conclusion	216
I	An Equitable and Decent International Society?	216
	Index	221