

Contents

Foreword by Antoine Lyon-Caen	v
Acknowledgements	vii
Table of Legislation	ix
Introduction. The New Frontier of Labour Law: Between Freedom and Security	1
1. Flexibility	7
1.1 The Origins of the Issue: The Demand for Labour Market Flexibility	7
1.2 Different Kinds of Flexibility	9
1.3 From the Standard Employment Contract to a Plurality of Types	11
2. Segmentation	15
2.1 Segmentation in EU Labour Markets	15
2.2 Contractual Arrangements and Segmentation in EU Labour Markets	18
2.2.1 The Prominence of Young People among Temporary Workers	18
2.2.2 The Missing Transition to Permanent Contracts	19
2.2.3 The Consequences of Labour Market Segmentation	20
2.2.4 Where Do We Go from Here?	21
3. The Single Employment Contract: Origins and Presuppositions	23
3.1 The Origins of the Single Employment Contract: 'Re-Thinking' Work	23
3.2 The Presuppositions of the Single Employment Contract	26
3.2.1 Protection and Employment: Questioning the Received Wisdom	26
3.2.2 Effective System, Effective Market: The Search for Compatibility between Law and Economics	29
3.3 The European Commission Perspective	34

Contents

4. An Outline of the Single Employment Contract	37
4.1 Basic Structure and Application	37
4.2 Monetary Compensation	38
4.3 Legal Norms	38
4.4 Other Rights	39
4.5 The Anticipated Benefits of the Single Employment Contract	39
5. Contrasting Views of the Single Employment Contract	41
5.1 Introducing the Single Employment Contract	41
5.2 Criticisms of the Proposal and Some Responses	42
5.2.1 Increasing Flexibility Might Damage Workers Who Are Currently Protected	42
5.2.2 Enterprises Will Have Less Flexibility in Recruitment	43
5.2.3 The Consolidation Period is Too Long	43
6. Selected Proposals for Introducing the Single Employment Contract	47
6.1 Italy: The Debate about Flexicurity	47
6.1.1 The Single Employment Contract: The Debate	49
6.1.2 The Single Employment Contract and Article 18 of the Workers' Statute	52
6.2 France: The Contrat de Travail Unique (CTU)	57
6.2.1 The Origin of the CTU	57
6.2.2 The Content of the CTU	58
6.2.3 Predecessors of the CTU: The CNE and CPE	59
6.2.4 The Debate	60
6.2.5 The Labour Market Situation	62
6.3 Spain: The Debate on the Single Employment Contract	64
6.3.1 Introduction	64
6.3.2 Factors in the Debate	65
6.3.2.1 Fixed-Term Contracts and Unfair Individual Dismissals	65
6.3.2.2 A Solution to Structural Labour Market Problems? Constitutional and Legal Perspectives	66
6.3.3 A Lively Debate	68
7. Contractual Arrangements in EU Labour Markets	69
7.1 Types of Protection Offered	70
7.2 Incentives to Convert Temporary Contracts into Open-Ended Contracts	73
7.3 Cost Structures and Financial Incentives in Choice of Contract Type	73
8. Further Developments	75
Conclusions	77
Annex. The Single Employment Contract Proposal	79
Select Bibliography	83
Index	91